The Fact,
Shisha.....

May seem sociable, but that doesn't mean it's safe

- A World Health Organisation study showed that even after passing through water, shisha smoke still contains high levels of cancer causing chemicals.
- Shisha smoke is cooled by water in the pipe, so it doesn't burn your lungs- meaning you can inhale more toxins and carbon monoxide.
- Second hand smoke from shisha is a mixture of smoke from the tobacco and smoke from the burning charcoal or wood, making it double trouble!
- Oral herpes and other more serious illnesses can be transmitted by sharing shisha pipes. Changing the mouthpiece is likely to reduce this risk, but nasty microorganisms can live inside the shisha pipe hose and water bowl- waiting for you to inhale with your next hit. Please be responsible and not share shisha pipes if you have a cold sore or have been unwell.

Shisha
Myth or Fact?

Myth 1: Shisha only contains fruit. Molasses, honey and sweeteners.

Fact: Just because shisha smells and tastes less nasty than cigarettes, doesn't mean it's less dangerous- it's still tobacco, only it's been sweetened or flavoured using fruit essences or dried fruit.

Myth 2: Smoking shisha is healthier than cigarettes and other forms of tobacco.

Fact: One puff of shisha is equivalent to smoking around a whole cigarette! Meaning you are putting yourself at risk of tobacco related illness such as cancers, heart and lung disease.

Myth 3: Shisha has no effect on gum and teeth.

Fact: Shisha smokers are more likely to suffer from gum disease which can lead to tooth loss, more so than cigarette smokers!

Myth 4: You cannot get addicted to shisha, as it contains no nicotine.

Fact: A typical one hour shisha session can expose you to the same amount of tar and nicotine as one pack of cigarettes! That 'buzz' you get from smoking shisha is not only a nicotine rush, it is also a sign of carbon monoxide intoxication. Shisha smokers have reported that they developed nicotine addiction through smoking shisha and now smoke cigarettes as well.
