West of Scotland technologist training

David Keating (NHS Greater Glasgow & Clyde) and Robin M. McDade (Glasgow Royal Infirmary) explain how training needs are answered north of the border

TWO RECENT STRATEGIC Scottish government documents are 'Clinical Strategy' and 'Realistic Medicine'. These documents recognise that technology and innovation are key to changing the delivery of modern healthcare by moving from an episodic model of healthcare to an anticipatory model. Both documents provide an excellent opportunity for the Department of Clinical Physics and Bioengineering (DCPB) of NHS Greater Glasgow and Clyde to make a real impact on the implementation of the strategic aims for the delivery of healthcare in Scotland.

In DCPB, we have more than 350 clinical scientists and technologists embedded within the full range of clinical services. Our technologists perform a wide range of activities ranging from management of more than 40,000 medical equipment assets through to production of novel radionuclide tracers.

Recent developments

Technology is changing in terms of complexity with the potential to acquire continuous data from patients in the community, perform analytics and dashboard the findings back to clinicians or other healthcare professionals. It is our staff who have the skill sets to implement and manage real change. Two recent developments offer DCPB participation in a national approach to deal with a technology informatics framework, introduction of new technologies and modern management of medical equipment. These developments are the establishment of a national medical physics network (MPNET) and the shared services agenda in clinical engineering. Our scientists and technologists are actively contributing to these new initiatives. DCPB continues to develop through upskilling in IT for our technologists, the introduction of modern apprenticeship programmes and implementation of IPEM practitioner programmes. It is hoped that a national approach via the shared services and MPNET initiatives will help promote the broad training scheme that Robin is about to describe end to a training system built around an organ[illegible] vivacity stemmed from reciprocity –

4 Star Corfu Beach Holiday

Corfu is the most popular of the Ionian Islands, with its unspoilt views, traditional villages and beautiful beaches, it's no wonder that the island is described as the 'Emerald Isle'. During the day enjoy rest and relaxation around the pool and maybe explore Corfu Town with its Mon Repos Palace, museum and streets lined with shops and cafes, and even a cricket pitch! Later, once the sun sets, join the locals in one of the many trendy bars or laid back tavernas. Whether you are after a lively holiday full of watersports or a quiet holiday, full of relaxation and culture, there is something to suit everyone in wonderful Corfu.

Located on one of the most beautiful sandy beaches in Corfu looking out over the Ionian Sea, the family run Mareblue Beach Resort Corfu is popular with families and couples. This great hotel offers a host of facilities, including 3 swimming pools, a gym, tennis courts and a kids club. At night, enjoy the live shows that the hotel animation team provide in the Teatro Loco. The main nightlife and shops are located 5km away in the resort of Acharavi.

What's Included:

- Direct return flights
- Baggage & return transfers from / to airport
- Seven nights' four-star all-inclusive stay at the Mareblue Beach Resort
- Regional departures are available at a supplement

EHP 285 ½ WATT REAR LIGHT
- Ultra-bright ½ Watt wide angle LED
- 2 Side LED for Extra side visibility
- Compact, robust water resistant design
- 3 modes: High power, flashing and chase
- Fits seat posts 25mm - 33mm
- Batteries Included

Fitting Instructions

- Attach the light to the bracket by sliding the belt clip into the belt clip holder until it clicks and is secure.
- Pull out the bracket and affix to the seatpin, so that the light faces directly to the rear.
- Finally, adjust the angle of the light using the supplied allen key so that the bracket is parallel to the ground.

- To remove the light from the bracket pull back gently on the knurled lever behind the belt clip and slide the light off.
- Be sure that the light is not obscured by objects such as mudguards or seatposts.

Battery Replacement

- Remove the light from your cycle.
- Insert a coin between the engineered slots opposite to the switch, twist gently and the red lens and reflector will pop off the light body.
- Remove the old batteries and replace with two new AAA size batteries, being careful to note the orientation of the batteries as illustrated in the diagram in the back of the battery housing.
- Orientate the lens and the light body making sure the arrows on the side are lined up, pop the assembly back together, ensure the lens is seated back into the main body.

Warning

Electron lights are not designed or intended to replace British Standard reflectors. Do not remove the original reflectors from your bicycle.
